

Message from the Chairman

I would like to take this opportunity to let everyone know the highlights of BABA activities in 2009 and the plans for 2010. Over the last few years BABA has mainly been a social club with trips, parties and the racing program. Last year BABA got involved with beach access issues at Mayo Beach and Rocky Point Golf Course. Without an organization like BABA involved, and a lot of effort from BABA members, we could have lost both sites.

Anne Arundel County had plans to redevelop Mayo Beach Park. Looking at the project during the planning stages it was clear that windsurfing access was not being considered. BABA met with the AACo Rec & Parks and worked with them to adjust the design plans. Beach construction has been delayed and is now scheduled to start in September 2010, after the 2 day East Coast Championships event. Maureen Pritchard and her team are keeping in contact with the county to insure that windsurfing is considered in any updates. BABA is also exploring other possible launch sites in the county.

Rocky Point gate was blocked with four large rocks preventing access to the launch site. Roger Fitzgerald met with Baltimore County Rec. and Parks and proposed a compromise plan to move the rocks for the spring and fall sailing seasons. Even with rocks sailing is still allowed but it's a longer walk to the car.

For 2010 BABA will continue with all social, race activates and access issues. Additionally we have two new projects.

First Baltimore County is interested in cleaning up the Back River. Last November a number of windsurfers helped with the clean up by the bridge. BABA is planning to have a beach clean up at the Rocky Point launch site in early spring. Details will be posted as soon as they are firmed up.

The second project is a partnership between BABA and the Baltimore County Sailing Center (BCAC) to promote Junior Racing. This year the Junior Olympics for sailing will be in Rock Hall Yacht club (<http://www.rockhallyachtclub.org/jo.htm>) July 9-11. BCAC is planning to have a race camp the week before the Junior Olympics and would like to send racers to the Olympics. The problem is they do not have proper boards and this is where they need our help. I am proposing that BABA try to raise the funds to buy the sailing center two race boards. Since the Junior Olympics are one design the boards need to be the Techno boards. Over the next month I plan to work out the details and then I will start asking for cash donations. I believe this is the best way to get new blood into the sport. Additionally we may need some racers to help coach the junior racers on the weekends leading up the event.

After the last cold winter we had a great spring sailing season so get ready for some fun. Hope to see you at the winter party and thank you for your continued support of BABA.

US Windsurfing and U.S. Sailing proudly announce a new two-day Beginning Windsurfing Instructor training course. The new course makes it easy for those already holding Level 1 Small Boat Certification to earn beginning windsurfing certification in one-half the time and at significantly less cost than the standard four-day course.

The first two-day course will be held on February 7 and 8 as part of U.S. Sailing's NSPS (National Sailing Programs Symposium) taking place in Houston, Texas.

The course is limited to 12 student-instructors and the registration deadline is fast approaching.

MAY Hatteras Trip

Sign up NOW - Space is Going Fast!

Fulfill your New Year's Resolution to become a better windsurfer! Registration for BABA's May Hatteras Trip is now open. Obviously, this is the very FIRST resolution you should make and begin to implement immediately. The 2010 Hatteras trip dates are

Saturday to Saturday, May 1–May 7, and this is the first time ever that the trip has included BOTH May Day and Cinco de Mayo. Wow! This is so obviously a positive portent that I'm at a loss for further promotional comment. However, for those BABA-ites still in winter hibernation, perhaps a reminder of why the May Trip is the sine qua non of windsurfing adventures is worth putting forth:

- 1) Long Days (past the Equinox!) mean MORE windsurfing.
- 2) Warmer Days (often in 70's) mean warmer water = MORE windsurfing.
- 3) Houses in Island Creek (right ON the water) mean quicker water access = MORE windsurfing

4) Sail and board storage under houses mean quicker rigging and assembling = MORE windsurfing

5) Fewer Jellyfish and not as many Mosquitoes mean happier windsurfers, and happier windsurfers do MORE windsurfing

6) April 15-May 15 is WINDY in the outer banks, so we'll be doing MORE windsurfing

7) Inexpensive accommodations mean you can save your money for more equipment (to handle a greater range of conditions) which means MORE windsurfing.

8) No more waiting for windsurfing buddies to get it together and get in the water...BABA-ites will be out there with you whenever you want to go out for a "sesh." Hence, MORE windsurfing

9) BABA Discounts of 10% on equipment at local windsurfing shops = more equipment = MORE windsurfing

10) In fact, besides eating, sleeping, making friends, renewing friendships, partying, and checking your e-mail, there's Nothing to do BUT windsurf.

Rates this year are still an incredible vacation bargain: $225 for a single shared room OR den space; $450 for a private room. Houses are Island Star, Island Tempest, Island Squall, Island Breeze, Island Attitude, and Surround Sound. Please note: Just as we did last year, Surround Sound will be filled last (unless you indicate you want to be in that house...and you might, because the rooms there are all spacious master suites with their own baths). Space is going fast so get your reservation in ASAP! Reminder: 2010 dues – Jan to Jan ($20) MUST be paid up before your reservation can be confirmed. You can include your dues with the reservation form, or mail them separately to Ann Jackson, BABA's Membership Coordinator.

Please send your reservation form to my new temporary address (see below).

The Rush is on!

See you on the water.

Terrific Tarifa! (If you are a “Tea Bagger” ...)

by Amber Kasbeer

My BFFs will tell you that I whined the entire way from our beach house just outside of Cadiz to Tarifa. “THERE’ S NO WIND!! whhhaaaa!! The web site says it ALWAYS blows in Tarifa... whine whine whine moan moan moan...” It was a beautiful sunny day out, the kind that only a windsurfer would curse. The leaves on the trees only rustled as our car past, and indeed the 100s of wind turbines along the way were taking a siesta. I felt doomed. “... whhhhyyy meee??! whhhy today??!”

The day before we had made the drive past 1000s of hectares of olive groves from Grenada where I had spent the five previous days buried deep in a technical conference and gorging on all the lovely foods of the region. My body was ready for a killer sesh of the afore mentioned “promised winds”. And it looked like I was nearing mecca when we drove up to our beach house the night before to howling winds and white capped seas. I had a huge smile of anticipation as I looked out from our beach house. “This,” I thought, “is going to be awesome!”

“Ahhh, Senora, the winz are no so good today”, the man at each of the rental places I visited would say. And I found myself asking in reply, “whats the biggest gear you got?” There are three places to rent gear from on the beach in Tarifa. Going from east to west along the beach you have: Club Mistral, Spin Out, and Ozu. I ended up renting gear from the later. It had the best deal and they also offered Starboards of which I was very eager to try the new Futura after having read about it and actually getting to see one at East of Maui. (You can find out more about Ozu at www.tarifawindsurfing.com.)

As I was sailing in mid September, the prices for renting gear had dropped slightly and most places included the wet suit (which was needed) in with the rental. My rental for the day was 65 Euros, which can be expensive depending on the exchange rate. Ozu had a nice bar, restroom (a very good attribute considering the abundance of cervezas and Tinto de Veranos one might consume on a non windy day...), and a nice grassy area with beach chairs where the non windsurfing BFFs can lounge whilst you flounder in waves and no wind.

I took out Ozu’s biggest sail (7.5 Severn) and a 144 Futura. The girl at the rental desk raised her eyebrows when I had asked for the 7.5. “Oh, you are strong!” As english was not her first language and my Spanish was limited to individual words usually associated with food items, I had no way to communicate that living and windsurfing in the mid-atlantic often produced such strength not by choice but rather out of necessity and that she could probably do loops around me at her choosing. As I tromped from Ozu across the beach with my Futura and 7.5 in my determination to “go windsurfing in Spain”, I somehow failed to notice the increasing number of kites going up in the distance. Let blind determination be a warning for these such moments...

The beach drops off quickly, giving you not much room to jump on before you are over your head. After a quick self taught lesson on this aspect of the launch site, I had finally managed a successful yet graceful launch in the direction of Africa with a huge grin on my face. I did it! I was windsurfing in Spain! Ohhh wouldn’t all my BABA friends be jealous! Finally, I would be in the league of Daphne and Steve and their Greek adventures or Bill and Helen and their Irish exploits!

It was then when reality came crashing down on me, or rather a beginner kite, “WHHUUMP!” (I have to learn in the future to cus in the appropriate language of the country I am in...) After I uphauled my 7.5, and righted my self I looked down the beach... OMG!! There were thousands of them!!! And I spent the next half a mile or so dodging strings until I could get past the masses. Out to sea, and Africa, I went! And it was there I stayed. The wind did finally pick up, and there were moments where I

Windsurfing Travels 2009

by Tom Beckman

I windsurfed at Bird Island Basin, North Padre Island, near Corpus Christi in July. Worldwinds Windsurfing, Inc. has a "hut" (no electricity) loaded with equipment next to the water on the Laguna Madre, the sailing water between the island and the mainland. Don Jackson there is great to work with and very helpful. There is a post out in front of the shop with placards people from all over the world have made saying where they have come from. There is a camping area less than 100 yds. away $10.00 for as many nights as you like. This is National Seashore so there is no lodging closer than 10 miles away. There are showers that can be used at a nearby campground. I also sailed on Keystone Lake at Keystone State Park in SW PA in late August. It's a small lake, but works up a good wind once in awhile. But there is nothing like a seabreeze! So my wife Joni & I went to Assateague Island State Park in Maryland in September and I got a little fix there at the day use area on the left just before you cross the bridge to the island. There is a great grassy area just at the water's edge for rigging up. I also picked up a Doyle 90L board used and a new Ezzy Freeride(3) 5.5 sail and a new boom this summer. Can't wait til the May Hatteras trip to get the new toys out there and see you all again. I am looking forward to doing the picnic again, but probably no turkey burgers this time because they fall apart too easily on the grill. What the heck! We will have another good time. I also want to get to a Gunpowder Gig too which I have not been able to do since I am 4 hours away. In between all this fun I still have to work since things keep happening such as car repairs, hot water heater and dryer going out, kids asking fo $$$, etc..

Happy sessions!

Windsurfer's Lament

by Bud Fakoury

Old Father Time has caught up with me, and unwilling physical limits say "Nomore". To be sure it has been a sad day to "put away my childish things." I read your accounts on the More_Downhaul newsgroup, and I yearn for your experiences. BABA has got a good thing going, especially, the newsgroup and the Avon caper. I am glad that I had one fantastic trip with you all at Avon in 2007. Enjoyed meeting so many nice folks who had so much in common. The venue was great.

I gave up ten years of white water canoeing in favor of windsurfing. Started windsurfing in 1986 in Florida, where I bought a board and sail. Went out in the ocean and could not stay on the board. I must have uphauled 50 times before I was able to stay up and achieve some momentum. When I did, I heard some applause from the beach (apparently people were watching me struggle). When I heard this, I turned to look, and promptly fell in again.

I took lessons, twice with ABK / Andy Brandt and camped at Waves during May and October off and on from 1995-2000. It was a great public sailing site, (adjacent to Barton Decker's Hatteras Island Surf Shop) until they started building houses there several years ago. Now, not a great access.

Several trips to Aruba and Bonaire followed. These were great, good place to learn, but I guess i never did. Struggled to learn how to jibe until one day, I wrote this jingle:

If I die before I jibe
Lay my board along my side
Toss me out where seagulls soar
And I'll just tack to reach the shore.

Never really thought that this would become a reality, but I guess I will leave the sport without mastering

Bud and Ellie in Bonaire

this move, which really marks the transition from beginner to beyond. Mind you now, I could sail around on a plane, tack well, but a good jibe always eluded me. The answer, lack of practice. I thought the outer Banks would be the answer, but the time and distance were resistance points. As good as the wind should be there, I had been skunked many times during these camping trips.

Now I have to read these delicious stories about guys who sail from Mayo to Thomas Point Lighthouse and return in the fog. (WHEW!!) and other enticing tales. . . Farewell, and good winds, and as neatly painted on the back of a trailer some years ago: "Give us this day, our daily breeze" was sailing way over powered on the 7.5 and dumping wind just to stay upright. But in my determination to avoid the land of strings, I managed to make do with what mother nature provided on the gear I had with me. In the end it turned out to be a great session. I made the journey out to the open waters twice through the "gauntlet" and stayed out until my fatigued body told me my time was up.

My BFFs spent the day wandering the beach, drinking Tintos, eating great dishes from Ozu, and enjoying the sun. As I staggered from the water lugging my gear back onto land they all came to cheer me on and help me carry it back to Ozu. I was tired, but extremely satisfied. I had windsurfed in Spain. What could be better than going to exotic places with your best friends, where the weather is warm, the food and drink delicious, and you get an awesome session out on the water? As we drove back to our house that evening, I noticed that the wind turbines had awakened from their slumber and were now spinning slowly in the evening breeze. Who knows, maybe the winds always do blow in Tarifa, just someday it takes a "Tinto" or two.
